

SUNDAY, JUNE 9, 2018 – 6:30 AM WEATHER FORECAST

The final day of the match will be cooler and cloudier as a couple of waves of low pressure track by to our south – the first this morning and the second this evening. High pressure building southeast from Canada is providing some unseasonably dry air to the area, but at the same time, lots of clouds will be streaming in from the west. Most of my forecast models show a fine line between measurable rain and little to nothing – and we are north of that line. However, a few sprinkles can't be ruled out today and especially this evening after play ends. The high today will reach 72 F/ 22 C. Winds will average 5 mph with a few gusts to 10 mph, from the northeast this morning, east around lunch time, and southeast this afternoon. Tonight will be cooler with a low of 52 F/ 11 C. There will be a 40 percent chance for a sprinkle and 20 percent chance for a shower, especially before 2 a.m. It will turn sunnier and remain cool tomorrow with a gusty northeast breeze around 5-10 mph with a high gust near 15 mph. The high will again reach 72 F/ 22 C.
