

SUNDAY, AUGUST 9, 2020 – 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

This morning is set to start off with a partly cloudy sky and just a few patches of fog but otherwise quiet weather conditions at Woodmont. Early morning haze will burn off fairly quickly and the sun will break out by mid to late morning as a weak area of high pressure settles in across the DC area. This pattern will lend itself to hotter temps this afternoon, when still high humidity should help push the heat index value into 90s. We also anticipate little to no wind the majority of the day, and just a 20% chance at best for a passing shower in the late afternoon / early evening. Looking ahead to Monday, clear weather but also hotter conditions will be the story to kick off the week, and other than some early morning patchy fog, travel weather across Maryland looks good!
