

JUDICIAL NOMINATING COMMISSION POSITIONS OPEN

Judicial District Nominating Commissions seeking applicants for attorney and non-attorney positions

What do the commissions do?

Judicial Nominating Commissions are responsible for reviewing applications for judicial officers (judges), interviewing the candidates, and submitting two or three final candidates to the Governor, who makes the final appointment. Every Judicial District in Colorado has a Nominating Commission, and there is a separate Nominating Commission for the appellate courts (Court of Appeals and Supreme Court). Nominating Commissions meet only when there is a judicial officer vacancy in the Judicial District.

Who can serve on a commission?

Each Judicial Nominating Commission consists of seven citizens residing in that judicial district. No more than four members can be from the same political party, and there must be at least one voting member from each county in the district. Commission members serve six-year terms. Non-attorney, who are the majority of every nominating commission, are appointed by the Governor. Attorney members are appointed by joint action of the Governor, Attorney General, and Chief Justice of the Colorado Supreme .

Note that by law nominating commission members:

- shall not hold any elective and salaried U.S. or state public office or any elective political party office;
- are not eligible for appointment to judicial office in that district while they serve as a commission member and for one year thereafter;
- are not eligible for reappointment to succeed themselves on a commission; and
- on the supreme court nominating commission are not eligible for appointment as a supreme court justice or appellate court judge while serving as a member of that commission and three years thereafter.
