

THURSDAY, JUNE 15, 2017 – 5 AM WEATHER FORECAST

The radar shows thunderstorms to the south of Milwaukee moving northeast and out over the lake, leaving our area with partly cloudy skies. Clouds this morning will gradually break for a mostly sunny day, with lowering humidity levels as a cold front pushes through this morning. Highs today will reach the middle 80s but it will be much less humid with dewpoints dropping from the 60s this morning into the upper 50s this afternoon. Winds from the southwest will increase and become westerly today around 10 mph, with a high gust of 18 mph or so. Another disturbance will cross the area tonight, bringing a 40 percent chance for a shower or storm, mostly late this evening on. Tomorrow will feature more clouds with a southwest breeze at similar speeds to today and a 20 percent chance for a shower or storm in the morning, with a 40 percent chance later and at night as the next disturbance moves through the area. The weather on Saturday will be more unsettled and more humid as a cold front moves into the area, followed by cooler weather on Sunday.
