

FRIDAY, JUNE 16, 2017 – 5 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Today will feature more clouds than yesterday, but still periods of sunshine and a southwest breeze at similar speeds as yesterday - around 8-14 mph with a few gusts 14-20 mph around lunchtime. There is a chance for a shower or storm at any time, but most of the day should be rain-free. It will continue to be warm and a rather humid with highs in the middle 80s and dewpoints in the 60s. Tonight, another disturbance aloft will bring a better chance for a shower or storm to the area as the low drops into the middle 60s. Tomorrow will become more unsettled due to an approaching cold front with a 40 percent chance for a shower or storm during the day - but that chance will climb at the end of the day and in the evening as a complex of showers and storms tracks near Erin Hills. Sunday will cooler with temps finally closer to their average this time of year. Winds will gust around 25 mph Sunday with a 40% chance of an instability shower or some sprinkles early to mid afternoon.
