

MONDAY, JULY 10, 2017 – 5 AM WEATHER FORECAST

After a sunny, cool start to the day, clouds will increase later this morning as a weak disturbance moves into the area. That disturbance will bring with it a 20 percent chance for a shower or storm from midday on and a quick return to summerlike humidity in the afternoon as the high today reaches 86. The chance for a shower or storm will linger into this evening and clouds stick around. Winds today will be south to southwest around 6 mph, with a few gusts to 12 mph or so. Tuesday through Thursday will be hot and humid with scattered showers and storms possible each day as a series of storms track across the region. Winds will average 5-10 mph with a few higher midday gusts, generally from the west to southwest each day. We keep the chance for a shower and storm in the forecast Friday as a front is likely to hang out over or just south of the region, bringing plenty of clouds and a drop in daytime temperatures as we may be stuck with a more easterly wind for one day.
