

TUESDAY, AUGUST 29, 2017 – 6:15 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Much of this forecast is characterized by mostly sunny skies along with warm temperatures. However, there are some exceptions. We could see brief patchy fog late tonight and into early tomorrow morning, but doubtful it impacts play. Also, a weak cold front will be dropping southward tomorrow afternoon. Scattered showers and storms will be trying to form along this front. Any activity nearing us would do so from mid-afternoon on. I'm keeping the chances of a shower or storm here at 30%. However, this front is showing signs of stalling just to our south, and so some showers linger tomorrow night, and cloudiness could linger into Thursday morning. High temperatures today and tomorrow near 80. Highs on Thursday near 75. Winds will be light today, tonight, and tomorrow morning. A gentle east wind becomes established tomorrow afternoon at 5 to 10 mph. Tropical Storm Harvey continues to cause epic flooding in TX, especially near Houston.
