

TUESDAY, AUGUST 7, 2018 – 6:30 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Another hot and humid day on tap today. Do what you can to stay hydrated. We can (again) expect to see afternoon scattered showers and storms, and generally in the 30% to 40% range (peaking at around 3 PM). The upper-level trough to our west draws nigh tonight. This means we can expect more numerous showers and storms tomorrow and Thursday, and they could occur at any time. Lower chances for Friday and the weekend, mainly back to the 30% to 40% range. Expect calm/light winds this morning, then a west-southwest wind this afternoon at 6 to 12 mph. Very similar wind scenario tomorrow. High temperature today at 94 degrees. Heat index could top out at 99. Low tonight a muggy 71. Dew points stay mainly in the lower 70s, so no real change to our mugginess, until this weekend, when dew points drop to the upper 60s. Some fog is possible late Thursday night and Friday night, but it's unlikely to affect our play in the mornings.
