

FRIDAY, AUGUST 10, 2018 – 9 AM WEATHER FORECAST

We picked up .44" of rainfall yesterday from 3 different storms. We also have some showers presently around this morning. Our active and unsettled weather pattern continues. A weak upper-level trough is draped over TN. Also, a surface frontal boundary approaches us today slowly from the north. These weather features mean we can expect the continued threat showers and storms for most of today. Localized very heavy rainfall is an on-going possibility. Most likely time-frame today is between 11:30 AM and 1:30 PM. We revert back to scattered PM showers and storms (finally) for the weekend. Expect a west wind this morning, then a northwest wind this afternoon. Wind speeds 10 mph or below, except higher gusts in/near showers and storms. High temperature today at 88 degrees. Lows at night finally dipping to the upper 60s. Fog is probable very early tomorrow morning and Sunday morning, though it should burn off quickly.
