SUNDAY, MAY 19, 2019 – 5 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Overall the forecast for today is slightly better than yesterday. Temps are starting off milder around 70 degrees and they will try to peak in the low to mid 90s this afternoon. Dewpoints this morning will be in the mid to upper 60s before dropping back into the lower half of the 60s this afternoon. So basically we'll be as hot or almost as hot as yesterday, but the difference today will be the wind. Southwest breezes to start this morning will become a straight south wind this afternoon. Speeds will vary depending on your location, but expect 5-10 mph the next few hours with speeds spending more and more time above 10 mph by lunchtime with a high gust approaching 20 mph on course possible (especially north - south facing holes). Sunshine this morning will mix with some shade clouds again this afternoon with a 20% chance of a shower or storm from 2 PM on into this evening. The models have been pretty consistent that our threat today is not quite as high as yesterday since the sea breeze will not be as drastic a boundary due to the breezier conditions today. Monday's outlook is still breezy and hot, but Tuesday looks drier and a tad cooler thanks to weak front that limps through Monday night with another 20% threat of wet weather.
