

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 26, 2019 – 5 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Thankfully we only received 0.05" of rain with the storms that split the course in the evening hours and much of the overnight hours were partly cloudy. Temperatures are starting off in the upper 60s this morning and will reach the middle 80s again this afternoon. Sunshine this morning will be filtered by some high clouds at times, but overall we'll call it mainly sunny. This afternoon more lower clouds will billow up giving us a 20% chance of a shower or storm from 2 PM on with a 40% chance between 5 and 8 PM. Most of the activity should be on the south side of South Bend this afternoon and evening, but if the last 3 days are any indicator, we may have to be watching the skies once again later today. The wind will be a lot less breezy today out of the west and some southwest only getting up to 5-10 mph at times this afternoon. After the sun goes down tonight, we'll maintain a 20% chance of a shower or storm overnight into Thursday morning, but this feature is looking right now to keep most, if not all, of it's wet weather in Wisconsin. The next real 40% risk of wet and stormy weather comes Thursday night and/or Friday morning as the pattern stays active with slight chances here and there every 12 hours or so.
