

THURSDAY, JUNE 27, 2019 – 5 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Barely any rain fell 20 miles northeast of South Bend last night, but here in town we got clobbered by close to an inch of rain with the storms in the middle of the night. It will take the atmosphere a little time to recover, so look for skies to become mostly sunny for a good chunk of this morning. Then as we warm up from the 60s to start this morning towards 90 degrees this afternoon, clouds will begin developing with a 20% chance of a shower or storm most of the afternoon hours. Since we'll have fairly light southerly winds this afternoon, it seems possible that a 40% chance of a shower or storm could pop up as we get closer to dinnertime. A more organized piece of upper level energy will stay to our north tonight through Friday night, however since we'll eventually become hot and humid, the atmosphere should be able to once again support another 40% chance of a shower or storm tonight and again Friday night with a 20% chance during the day on Friday. It is a tricky pattern we are in right now and it looks to continue into this weekend with highs still near 90 degrees and enough humidity for a heat index in the low to mid 90s.
