

SATURDAY, JUNE 29, 2019 – 11 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Sunshine today will be filtered at times by high clouds and maybe partly sunny skies for brief bit early this afternoon. Spotty showers and storms will develop across northern Illinois and central Indiana this afternoon - so we'll have a 20% chance for a short time early in the afternoon, but almost every model has northern Indiana aiming to miss out on the action. Temps are warm this afternoon as we'll top out around 85 to 87 degrees and with dewpoints around 70 degrees early this afternoon the heat index could be close to 90 degrees for a bit, then as northwesterly flow takes over the humidity is forecast to drop later on today when dewpoints fall through the 60s. Tonight will be pretty clear and comfortably cool as this afternoon's quasi-cold front settles southwest, west and northwest of South Bend allowing temps to bottom out in the lower half of the 60s. Mostly sunny skies Sunday morning will mix with more clouds again in the afternoon as that boundary to our west may have some shower and storm development associated with it. We'll optimistically stay with a 20% chance for Sunday afternoon right now in hopes that any activity near us will stay to our west near the IL/IN border. Temps will be above average Sunday too with highs pushing 90 degrees and winds will be relatively light.
