SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 2019 – 6:45 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Sunny and dry conditions will continue today as temperatures warm to well above average in the afternoon. Expect morning temperatures to climb quickly into the 60s before mid-morning and to near 80 by lunch time, with low humidity and a southwest breeze around 5 mph. The afternoon will feature a shift to more east to southeast winds at 5 mph, with gusts near 15 mph possible later in the day as the high reaches 86. Tonight will remain clear with a southerly breeze as the low reaches the middle 50s. Skies will stay sunny tomorrow as the high reaches the upper 80s. More clouds should mix in later in the day and especially at night as some moisture tries to creep up from the south. Winds will be southwesterly early but should generally be easterly to southeasterly at 5-10 mph with gusts to near 18 mph later in the day. Expect more clouds and moisture to return early next week with very warm temperatures Monday followed by slight cooling Tuesday to Thursday. There will be a 20 percent chance for a shower or storm later Monday as well as Tuesday ahead of an approaching cold front. Winds will increase as well with possible gusts near 25 mph. Wednesday the chance lowers slightly before another front approaches the region later on Thursday, bringing the chance back up to 20 percent.
