

THURSDAY, AUGUST 6, 2020 – 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

A quick burst of overnight thunderstorms delivered 0.45" of rain to Woodmont in the early morning hours. That said, radar trends are currently improving and we anticipate only a few more raindrops over the next few hours. Clouds will be relatively thick early on, but should see some sunny breaks through the day. Humidity will remain high as temps climb into the low and maybe even mid 80s this afternoon. Into the evening, the threat for a passing shower or storm will increase again with the best chance for rain again overnight. The weak surface boundary that has been keeping our weather a bit unsettled will not move very far in the short term, so for Friday expect another potentially damp start, though we may see a bit more sunshine breaking out. The chance for a shower or storm comes back again Friday afternoon/evening, however the good news is the longer term trend is for steadily drier and hotter weather from Saturday into Sunday.
