

MONDAY, AUGUST 10, 2020 – 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Sunshine to start this morning will be mixing with a wave of low clouds and patchy fog/mist after 8 AM. While it is possible that they could stay just offshore, the best computer models show it a little more likely that we'll see a period of low clouds with potentially patchy fog/mist closer to lunchtime. As we near 2 PM though, this entire area of low level moisture is forecast to burn off thanks to the August sun. From that point on, the wind is expected to become strong and gusty again with a max gust up around 30 mph or so. Temps will try to reach the mid 60s at times today with lows back in the 50s again tonight. Areas of low clouds will be nearby late tonight into Tuesday morning, then sunshine should once again dominate Tuesday afternoon with highs in the 60s. The trend in the afternoon peak of the wind is a slight drop in speeds for Tuesday through Thursday afternoons before picking back up again on Friday.
