

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 2020 – 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Enjoy the warm weather today as temperatures are starting off around 60 degrees and will eventually max out in the upper 70s or maybe even 80 degrees this afternoon. There are a few clouds around the area this morning with a few sprinkles, mainly south and east of Manhattan, but overall this morning should feature a mixture of sunshine filtered through smoke and clouds. Increasing clouds will take over today as we transition from partly sunny skies to mostly cloudy skies by the end of the day. Dewpoints will be in the 60s today with lighter southwest flow as our high wind gust will likely only be in the 10-15 mph range. There is a 20% risk of a sprinkle this morning and then a 20% chance of a shower or storm this afternoon, however it is as we get closer and closer to sunset when we'll enter the 40% threat of generally light showers/sprinkles as the remnants from Sally scoot from the Carolinas to the Mid Atlantic coast. Look for some of those raindrops to be across our area tonight into the first half of Friday, then high pressure will usher in much cooler conditions for this weekend.
