

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 2020 – 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

High pressure has taken control of our weather and setting up to provide a cool, crisp Fall like weekend for Winged Foot. Temps are starting off in the mid to upper 40s, however northerly winds are making the wind chill feel more like 40 degrees early this morning. Look for sunshine all day today to very gradually warm up us into the low and middle 60s this afternoon. Blustery north winds this morning may gust up to around 20 mph a couple of times, however the main story as we head through this afternoon will be that the winds will be slackening spending more and more time below 10 mph. Dewpoints will stay in the 30s all day today, so very low humidity and as the sun goes down this evening under clear skies and lighter winds temps may even reach the lower half of the 40s to begin Sunday morning - that would be near record low territory for this area. There will be a couple high level clouds drifting by on Sunday, mainly in the morning, and that could hamper our warm up with highs potentially staying in the lower 60s. Northeast winds on Sunday will be breezy at times around 10 mph, but gusts are forecast to stay in the mid teens.
