

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 20, 2020 – 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Enjoy another early preview of Autumn again today as temps are starting off in the mid to upper 40s and will eventually warm up towards the lower half of the 60s this afternoon. A weak piece of energy aloft in the atmosphere is tossing a few high level cirrus clouds across our sky this morning that will filter our sunshine just a little, then as the afternoon wears on look for sunny, blue skies. Super low humidity once again today with dewpoints down in the 20s and 30s thanks to another northeasterly breeze. Winds are a little lighter to begin this morning, but should quickly pick up with a max gust near 20 mph at some point probably later on this morning. However the theme for the wind today, despite some ups and downs, is for a little more consistency in the 8-12 mph range for the most part by mid morning through mid afternoon with gusts generally in the mid teens. Look for the wind to tail off again slowly as we get later in the day into tonight under clear skies and lows in the 40s. And Monday is featuring lots of sunshine with highs closer to 66 degrees as temps gradually warm up this week.
