Bryson DeChambeau Wins the 2020 Championship

Jack Nicklaus, Tiger Woods and now Bryson DeChambeau. They are the three golfers who have captured an NCAA individual title, a U.S. Amateur and a U.S. Open. DeChambeau joined that esteemed fraternity at Winged Foot Golf Club with a performance for the ages on what many consider one of the game's most demanding championship tests.

DeChambeau carded a final-round, 3-under-par 67 to earn a decisive six-stroke victory over 54-hole leader and wunderkind Matthew Wolff, who was vying to become the first U.S. Open rookie to win the title since 20-year-old amateur Francis Ouimet in 1913.

"It's just an honor," said DeChambeau, who also is the 12th player to have won a U.S. Amateur and a U.S. Open. "I don't know what else to say. It's been a lot of hard work. Mr. Nicklaus has been always awesome to me. Tiger has always been great to me. I can't say thank you enough to them for helping push me along to be a better person and a better golfer, as well. To be in the likes of that company is special. I'll forever appreciate that."

The West Course has a well-earned reputation for doling out punishment in its previous major-championship turns. Three of the four previous U.S. Opens held on the A.W. Tillinghast masterpiece in the post-World War II era produced over-par winning scores, including the famous "Massacre at Winged Foot" in 1974 when Hale Irwin triumphed with a 7-over total of 287.

Sixty of the 61 competitors who completed the championship on a chilly and breezy late-summer day battled the West Course to a draw – or much worse (75.03 stroke average). DeChambeau, whose analytical, scientific approach to the game is accompanied by an aggressive "bomb-and-gouge" mentality, took on this bully with a full arsenal of brains and brawn.

The 27-year-old from Clovis, Calif., became just the fourth player in the championship's past 100 years to be the only player to better par in the final round and hoist the trophy. The trio before him were World Golf Hall of Fame inductees Gene Sarazen (1922) and Byron Nelson (1939), and Jack Fleck, who denied Ben Hogan a fifth title in 1955 at The Olympic Club.

DeChambeau is the only player in the six U.S. Opens contested at Winged Foot to post all four rounds at par or better, and was the only competitor to finish in red figures for the week (6-under 274).

"Surreal. It sounds amazing, but surreal," said DeChambeau of being a U.S. Open champion. "It's been a lot of hard work. It's one of those things that doesn't really hit you. It's not going to hit me until tonight."

The seeds for this championship began early in the week when DeChambeau laid out his bold strategy, though some critics derided his intentions. Winning at Winged Foot from the rough, they said, couldn't be done.

Then on Saturday night under floodlights on the practice facility following the third round, DeChambeau hit driver after driver, and 3-wood after 3-wood. He hit balls until just past 8 p.m. when the rest of his competition was either eating dinner or setting their alarm clocks.

While he only found six fairways on Sunday, DeChambeau put on an exquisite display of iron play and putting, hitting 11 of 18 greens and registering 27 putts. Starting the the final round two strokes back of Wolff, DeChambeau tied the 2019 NCAA champion when he rolled in a 14-foot birdie putt on the par-4 fourth and then took the lead for good when Wolff failed to convert a 10-footer for par at the par-4 fifth.

It appeared Wolff was ready for a second-nine battle after he matched DeChambeau's 37-foot eagle on the par-5 ninth with his own eagle from 10 feet to stay within a stroke. But on the second nine, Wolff began to wilt, coming home in 4-over 39 to DeChambeau's 1-under 34 that included seven consecutive pars from No. 12 for the former Southern Methodist star.

Wolff finished with a 75 to post solo second, while Louis Oosthuizen (281), Harris English (282) and Xander Schauffele (283) rounded out the top five.

"If there's anyone that I was worried about, it was him," Schauffele said of DeChambeau. "Everyone talked about hitting fairways out here. It's not about hitting fairways. It's about hitting on the correct side of the hole and hitting it far so you can kind of hit a wedge instead of a 6-iron out of the rough."

Wolff had hoped to complete one of the great stories in the annals of the U.S. Open. Sunday's final round came exactly 107 years to the day of Ouimet's stunning 18-hole playoff victory over British stalwarts Harry Vardon and Ted Ray at The Country Club outside of Boston. Like Ouimet, this was Wolff's first U.S. Open start, and just his second major since leaving Oklahoma State and turning pro 16 months earlier. Wolff won last year's 3M Open and tied for fourth in last month's PGA Championship to earn his exemption into this all-exempt field.

Rounds of 66-74-65 put him in position to win, only to see it unravel in the final round. He isn't the first 54-hole leader to suffer Sunday blues in the U.S. Open. Forty-six years ago, a 24-year-old Tom Watson carded a 79 at Winged Foot. Kenneth Ferrie, who shared the lead with Phil Mickelson, shot a 76 in 2006 at Winged Foot. Aaron Baddeley had an 80 at Oakmont in 2007 and Dustin Johnson shot an 82 at Pebble Beach in 2010. Watson (1980) and Johnson (2016) would eventually capture U.S. Open titles.

Championship History

On Oct. 4, 1895, the first U.S. Open Championship was conducted by the United States Golf Association on the nine-hole course of Newport (R.I.) Golf and Country Club.

The first U.S. Open was considered something of a sideshow to the first U.S. Amateur, which was played on the same course and during the same week. Both championships had been scheduled for September but were postponed due to a conflict with a more established Newport sports spectacle, the America's Cup yacht races.

Ten professionals and one amateur started in the 36-hole competition, which was four trips around the Newport course in one day. The surprise winner was Horace Rawlins, 21, an English professional who was the assistant at the host course. Rawlins scored 91-82—173 with the gutta-percha ball.

Prize money totaled $335, of which Rawlins won the $150 first prize. He also received a gold medal and custody of the Open Championship Trophy for his club for one year.

In its first decade, the U.S. Open was conducted for amateurs and the largely British wave of immigrant golf professionals coming to the United States.

As American players began to dominate the game, the U.S. Open evolved into an important world golf championship. Young John J. McDermott became the first native-born American winner in 1911 and repeated as champion in 1912.

In 1913, the U.S. Open really took off when Francis Ouimet, a 20-year-old American amateur, stunned the golf world by defeating the famous English professionals Harry Vardon and Ted Ray in a playoff.

Another surge in the championship's popularity coincided with the amazing career of Georgia amateur Robert T. Jones Jr., who won the U.S. Open four times (1923, 1926, 1929, 1930). Spectator tickets were sold for the first time in 1922 and a boom in entries caused the USGA to introduce sectional qualifying in 1924.

In 1933, John Goodman became the fifth and last amateur to win the U.S. Open. The others were Ouimet, Jerome D. Travers (1915), Charles Evans Jr. (1916) and Jones.

In each era, the world's greatest players have been identified by surviving the rigorous examination provided by the U.S. Open. Ben Hogan's steely determination boosted him to four victories (1948, 1950, 1951, 1953). Arnold Palmer's record comeback win in 1960, when he fired a final-round 65 to come from seven strokes off the lead, cemented his dash-ing image. Jack Nicklaus' historic assault on the professional record book began when he won the first of his four U.S. Open Championships in 1962, his rookie season as a professional.

Nicklaus, who also won in 1967, 1972 and 1980, is one of only four golfers to capture four U.S. Open titles. The others are Willie Anderson (1901, 1903, 1904, 1905), Jones and Hogan.

In 1954, the U.S. Open course was roped from tee to green for the first time. That year also marked the first national television coverage. Coverage was expanded by ABC Sports in 1977 so that all 18 holes of the final two rounds were broadcast live. In 1982, the first two rounds were broadcast live for the first time on ESPN. NBC began televising the U.S. Open in 1995 and was followed by Fox in 2015.

The format of the U.S. Open has changed several times. The USGA extended the championship to 72 holes in 1898, with 36 holes played on each of two days. In 1926, the format was changed to 18 holes played each of two days, then 36 holes on the third day. In 1965, the present format of four 18-hole daily rounds was implemented for the first time.

In 2002, a two-tee (No. 1 and No. 10) start was used for the first and second rounds. In addition, Bethpage State Park's Black Course in Farmingdale, N.Y., became the first facility owned by the public to host a U.S. Open. International qualifying sites were added in 2005 and the champion at Pinehurst Resort & Country Club, in Village of Pinehurst, N.C., was Michael Campbell, who qualified in England.

Brooks Koepka became the first player since Curtis Strange (1988-89) to win consecutive U.S. Opens with his victory at Shinnecock Hills Golf Club in 2018. Koepka also became the 22nd player to capture multiple U.S. Open Championships.

In 2020, the U.S. Open was postponed from June to September due to the COVID-19 pandemic. Both stages of qualifying was canceled which resulted in an all-exempt field. The field was limited to 144 players due to less daylight in the fall.
