

MONDAY, JUNE 14, 2021 – 11 AM WEATHER FORECAST

It is sunny and in the 70s and 80s pretty much everywhere across San Diego right now - except from La Jolla to Carlsbad as the marine layer has broken at times, but overall is still trying to hang on right along our coast with temps in the 60s. Low clouds and patches of fog were supposed to burn off in all the models this morning and now we really only have one or two models that are initialized properly. These models have the low clouds and patches of fog continuing through lunchtime before giving way to mostly sunny skies as we work our way through this afternoon. The low cloud marine layer tonight into tomorrow morning is not forecast to be as persistent with more mid to high clouds mixing with our sunshine. Highs have a better chance of hitting 70 degrees on Tuesday and Wednesday, then we are anticipated to return to the more typical, excellent Southern California weather for Thursday on.
