

SATURDAY, JUNE 19, 2021 – 5 AM WEATHER FORECAST

The marine layer came in last night several hundred feet higher than previous nights and thankfully stayed that way overnight. We very well may see it lower just a little at times through 8-9 AM though, so be on the lookout for a patch of fog or low cloud to go by, but generally the forecast for today is mostly cloudy early this morning, becoming partly sunny mid morning and then we'll try to catch more rays this afternoon than we did yesterday. Instead of seeing the sun filtered through low clouds like yesterday, we should have better glimpses of the sun by late morning through mid afternoon even though the marine layer cloud cover will hang along the coast at times. Temps will try to top out near 70 degrees this afternoon as our wind has already switched to become more west to northwest for today with just a little more speed than yesterday. Low clouds will rotate back in again before sunset today and then look for just about the same forecast for Sunday.
