

SUNDAY, JUNE 20, 2021 – 5 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Happy Father's Day! The marine layer came in last evening at the same height as Friday night, however it lowered a little more than Saturday morning and is almost reminiscent of Friday morning. Thankfully the ceiling is still higher than Thursday morning being just above Torrey Pines, so over the next couple of hours we'll be on the lookout for a few patches of fog. Otherwise the models tried to go kinder to us for this afternoon as our gray skies to start this morning are forecast to transition from mostly cloudy to partly sunny over the course of this morning with just as much, if not more, sunshine this afternoon than we had yesterday. Temps starting off about a degree cooler at 60 degrees now will make a stronger effort to get closer to 70 degrees this afternoon, given enough sunshine. Northwest winds that are light early this morning will become mainly a westerly breeze for this afternoon about the same or a little more than yesterday.
