

SUNDAY, JULY 11, 2021 – 5 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Just over another tenth of an inch of rain fell since sunset Saturday giving a weekend total nearly 1.50" between the severe weather Friday night, storms Saturday afternoon and last night's showers. There could be a pop shower or sprinkle through sunrise this morning, otherwise mostly cloudy skies this morning will transition towards partly sunny skies as the morning wears on. Skies will eventually become mostly sunny for a time this afternoon with a few clouds mixing in here and there. Temps starting off close to 60 degrees will warm up nicely this afternoon with highs in the upper 70s. Dewpoints will be lower today in the 60s thanks to northerly winds today that will become breezy at times midday. Tonight will become mainly clear and cool with lows in the upper half of the 50s. Look for mostly sunny skies on Monday with dewpoints down around 60 degrees as temps climb just past 80 degrees with light winds.
