

SUNDAY, JULY 25, 2021 – PRELIMINARY WEATHER OUTLOOK

We've had less than a tenth of an inch so far this morning and a leftover pop up shower or storm is still possible before lunchtime. Otherwise we'll try to see a few glimpses of the sun or brightening skies at times this afternoon, however temps will stay in the 70s for the most part. At some point this afternoon we may have to watch out for another area of showers and possibly storms to roll through Connecticut. It seems like around 5 PM is the most likely time frame, however it is only a 60% chance as the worst of the weather is forecast to be closer to NYC. All of this activity winds down overnight tonight and sets the stage for hotter conditions for Monday and Tuesday. A small cold front with little moisture sneaks through our area Tuesday night bringing cooler, more seasonal conditions for Wednesday. Then a stronger front marches in our direction with showers and storms Thursday followed by very nice weather on Friday, Saturday and maybe all of Sunday.
