

WEDNESDAY, JULY 28, 2021 – 5 AM WEATHER FORECAST

The storm that passed just north of the course last evening around sunset didn't drop any measurable rainfall at the clubhouse with 0.12" falling mainly just after midnight with lingering showers overnight. Fortunately all that activity has exited south and east of Brooklawn paving the way for what looks to be a good chance at a dry day. There is a 20% risk of a shower or storm today, but overall we are just looking at periods of clouds and sunshine with temps in the 60s now warming up close to 80 degrees this afternoon. Dewpoints will stay in the 60s today as northerly winds this morning eventually slacken and shift to more of a light Sound breeze this afternoon. South and southeasterly flow tonight will become breezy on Thursday as another storm system swings through New England. Look for the potential of showers and storms even in the morning hours tomorrow with the best chance of showers and storms in the afternoon as highs stay in the 70s.
