

SUNDAY, AUGUST 8, 2021 – 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

A damp and cloudier day to start things off here on this Championship Sunday here at Westchester CC as an active area of low pressure slowly spins its way along and up the coast of NY. As a result of this system, there will continue to be a chance for scattered showers through the mid-morning, however we do anticipate at least some partial clearing (if brief) towards midday. After that, we will still have to watch for at least the chance of a few more instability showers on the back edge of this disturbance through the late afternoon. Any shower that does pass through in the afternoon could feature a brief downpour and perhaps the brief rumble of thunder. But beyond this one concern, overall the day's weather looks to be variably cloudy and milder on an easterly to northeasterly flow, with temps struggling to reach past 80F late in the day. Looking towards Monday, the pattern once again starts off relatively quiet making for good travel weather from the southern New York area. But for now, enjoy a milder day and have a great Championship out there!
