

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 2021 – 2 PM WEATHER FORECAST

Look for lots of sunshine this afternoon as our blue skies occasionally allow some very high cirrus clouds to float by and mix in at times. North and northwest winds will blow above 5 mph at times as they eventually slacken later today into tonight. Just like yesterday, today's high temperature will top out in the low 80s with dewpoints still lingering in the mid and upper 50s. After bottoming out in the upper 50s Sunday morning, high temperatures will be back into the mid to upper 80s with still relatively comfortable humidity levels. Afternoon winds will become onshore as we head through early next week increasing the lower level humidity which will result in more fair weather clouds mixing with our sunshine. Temps will also be heating up towards the upper 80s by Wednesday in advance of the next weak front sliding southward Thursday bringing a 40% chance of a shower.
