

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, 2021 – 7 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Similar story to yesterday, winds stay fairly light throughout the morning with predominantly sunny skies taking shape throughout today. Temps will sharply climb into the low 80s come lunchtime, eventually topping out in the mid and upper 80s this afternoon. Dewpoints continue to stay in the low 60s, which will once again keep the humidity fairly low and manageable as a few puffy clouds begin to mix in mid to late afternoon. Winds will also start to pick up during this timeframe as an onshore sea breeze introduces some pleasant gusts mainly below 10 mph. The low tonight will linger near the mid 60s and will be a bit more mild as moisture begins to creep back into the region. A few high clouds try to filter in Tuesday as temperatures slightly warm above average for this time of year. Look for less clouds and more heat on Wednesday in advance of a decaying disturbance moving in on the Carolinas this Thursday.
