

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 20, 2022 – 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Clouds and showers will continue over the next several hours in the rainforest narrowly to our south, however here at Grand Reserve we only have a 20% chance of seeing a measurable shower before all this energy gets pushed farther south and west giving us a pretty decent day by late morning on. Winds will come a bit more from the due east today rather than the east and southeast like they have been. And look for the wind gusts today to stay in the mid to upper 20s instead of gusting over 30 mph like the last few days. Temps in the 70s will top out in the mid 80s today and look for a 20% chance of a shower tonight with the shower chances increasing Thursday in advance of a disturbance that will likely bring some measurable rainfall Thursday night into Friday morning. Then our flow will become more east and northeasterly as we head into this weekend with wind gusts potentially maxing out in the mid 20s.
