

THURSDAY, APRIL 21, 2022 – 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

We received 0.43" of rain at the clubhouse last evening, however since these tropical showers are so small, as little as a quarter of an inch could have fallen across parts of the course. No measurable rain has fallen since midnight and the forecast for today calls for a 40% chance of rain showers that bring accumulation - but don't be surprised if sometime between mid morning and early this afternoon we get some passing sprinkles. The wind today will be similar to yesterday with a high gust pushing 27 mph, however most of the gusts are expected to be in the mid 20s out of the due east. While the models can have a hard time picking up these smaller showers in advance, tonight the computer models are showing rainfall is certain with over an inch not out of the question through Friday morning. This approaching area of showers on radar should decrease in coverage and intensity as Friday progresses with slightly lower wind gusts heading into this weekend.
