

SATURDAY, APRIL 23, 2022 – 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Winds will start off on the lighter side to begin this morning, but look for them to pick up as the morning progresses with gusts in the low to mid 20s by this afternoon. The wind direction will become the most northeasterly as it's been all week as a weak wave of moisture heads towards Puerto Rico. A rogue shower/sprinkle is possible early and late today, however the main threat appears to be in the middle of the day. We would be pretty unlucky to see significant measurements of rainfall with once again a trace to a few hundredths seeming more likely for Grand Reserve. The random chance of a shower/sprinkle tonight exits on Sunday as we should wind up with a pretty nice afternoon finish. Temps will be about the same today and tomorrow starting off in the lower half of the 70s and barely climbing over 80 degrees each afternoon. The wind on Sunday looks to feature just a little more velocity than today coming more from the east/northeast.
