

SUNDAY, APRIL 24, 2022 – 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

After a relatively quiet night, there are scattered showers on the radar to our northeast this morning that looks to give us a brief 40% chance of a few raindrops around 7 AM or shortly after this morning, otherwise it should be mainly a 20% threat this morning with some periods of a 0% chance this afternoon. Temps are starting off in the mid to upper 70s and we'll top out in the lower half of the 80s today. East and northeast winds will be a little more noticeable today gusting right now well into the teens with gusts midday of 24-27 mph possible. Monday should be pretty much a repeat of today and most of this week with similar temps and slightly less wind than today. The chance of precip is about the same as well with the highest risk coming during the nighttime and morning hours.
