

MONDAY, MAY 30, 2022 – 5 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Only a couple clouds around this morning in combination with calm winds will lead to a quick warm up throughout the morning into the mid 80s. The high temperature will be slightly warmer than yesterday and top out in the low 90s. Winds will be light and out of the southeast for the majority of the day, which will bump our dew points up slightly making it feel like the mid 90s at times. Conditions will primarily stay dry today and tomorrow except for a rogue shower/storm in the afternoon and early evening. Short range models show these potential pop ups missing our county today, but maybe giving us a slightly better chance tomorrow. Winds continue to remain out of the south, keeping that increase in moisture around as temperatures slowly warm in the mid 90s for midweek. With the approach of the next system from our northwest, showers and storms stay in the forecast, but the exact timing is still unsure heading into Thursday afternoon and Friday.
