

FRIDAY, June 10th, 2022 – 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Dewpoints falling near 50 degrees with clear skies overhead produced a cool, crisp start to the AM. Light and variable winds overnight then acted to generate our coldest start yet with temps right at 57 degrees as the sun came up this morning. The combination of falling dewpoints along with our strongest winds to date under clearing skies Thursday afternoon also then provided the driest afternoon we have seen immediately following the inch of rain yesterday morning. Temps will climb into the low 60s for the start of Four-Ball Matches while winds will begin to increase, mainly from the NW where it is expected to remain for the majority of the day. Speeds averaging 6 mph gusting to near 12 mph as teams play the front 9 will increase to 9 mph, gusting into the mid teens, as play makes the turn; intensity and direction holding steady for Foursomes matches this afternoon. Temps will warm quickly under clear skies rising into the late morning climbing into the upper 70s for the start of afternoon matches ahead of approaching cloud cover cooling off the area back into the mid to low 70s as matches conclude this evening.
