

SATURDAY, June 11th, 2022 – 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Light and variable winds overnight coupled with a mixture of low and mid level cloud cover allowed our dewpoints to bounce back near 60 degrees at sunrise this morning to then provide a slightly warmer feel to start Four - Ball Matches this morning with temps in the mid 60s at 8 AM under mostly cloudy skies. Morning matches will once again see winds mainly from the northwest with speeds this morning very similar to Foursomes Friday afternoon as result of a high pressure dominating the weather across the region through the day Saturday as it makes its way east across the southern border of PA continuing out to sea then this evening. Mid - Level clouds are expected to linger across the region for the entirety of the weekend which will help temps cooler on Saturday that previously seen this week with temps climbing into the mid 70s as play finishes up this morning but then staying there with approaching system from our west acting to provide the chance for showers today focused between 11 AM and 3 PM with little to no accumulation expected prior to clouds trying to break up during Foursomes Saturday afternoon.
