

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 15, 2022 – 5 AM WEATHER FORECAST

After another clear and fairly calm start to Wednesday with temperatures in the low 60s, sunshine will often peak through some lower clouds this morning with temperatures slow to climb through the 60s. The high temperature today will struggle, but should reach near 74 degrees this afternoon thanks to cooler onshore flow and a handful of higher clouds approaching from the northwest this afternoon. We stay cool and mostly clear overnight into Thursday morning with the low temperature nearing the mid 50s. Cloud cover looks to build back in for Thursday while south to southwest winds offer a warm up late week. The chance for a shower/storm is possible leading into Friday as the next cold front will dip south from Canada. Our winds still capable of gusting over 20 mph at times will transition back west and north for the weekend with cooler and drier air settling back in.
