

FRIDAY, JULY 22nd, 2022 – 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

There is the possibility of seeing some patchy fog in a few areas first thing this morning while our winds stay calm with clear skies. This should burn off quickly with the abundance of sun returning for the majority of the day. We heat up near 96 degrees with dew points manageable around the mid 60s. The heat index will still be near 100 degrees at times this afternoon, so please continue to take proper precautions in staying cool and preventing heat exhaustion/dehydration. A few clouds try to filter in later and overnight, but otherwise we continue to look dry into the final round. We continue our warming trend into Saturday seeing a high temperature one or two degrees hotter than today with a bit more surface moisture. This will once again drive our Heat Index into the oppressive category with it feeling like the low to mid 100s at times. Despite high pressure in place across the region, this heat and humidity will drive a slim chance for a spotty pop-up along I-65 near the KY/TN border tomorrow afternoon and evening.
