

SATURDAY, JULY 30th, 2022 – 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Mid - level clouds are currently moving north up the coastline acting to keep the marine layer hanging on slightly longer this morning over us here. A thicker marine layer kept temperatures in the upper 50s overnight while winds have already started to blow this morning with speeds averaging near 4 mph gusting to 9 mph at times. As the marine layer begins to burn off and makes its way offshore, we will once again have mostly sunny skies across the resort this afternoon warming temps into the low 60s this afternoon while winds will shift over to the NNW just before noon, with increasing speeds now blowing in the mid teens gusting into the low 20s at times, very similar to what we saw on Friday. Like the previous three days, high tide this afternoon is at 2:45 PM, so expect to see the marine layer start to push on shore for a brief time between 2 and 4 PM this afternoon before returning this evening at 7 PM lasting through the evening.
