

SUNDAY, JULY 31, 2022 – 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

A mountain mist this morning will begin to erode away into a mostly cloudy, dry day. Temperatures look to make their way into the mid 60's by 5 PM, with very light winds under 10 mph out of a primarily western direction. There remains a 20% chance of sprinkle action throughout the day just in case of a blindside attack from a shower, but expect impacts to be minimal with hardly the use of an umbrella. Overall, a decent weather day! Overnight, low temps are held in the mid 50s ahead of our second storm system arriving early Monday. Starting as early as 7 AM, rain begins to take over Anchorage. Measurable precip in the neighborhood of half an inch is expected through the day on Monday, peaking in the PM hours. Eventually the moisture retreats, drying us out on the second half of Tuesday into Wednesday.
