

FRIDAY, AUGUST 26, 2022 – 5 AM WEATHER FORECAST

A thunderstorm just missed us to the south during the 4 AM as showers and storms formed to the north and south across the Dayton area. For the majority of the day we will be dodging pop-ups that will have the ability to produce a similar result that we saw this morning with our best chance showers and storms taking place between 10 AM and 12 PM later on today. While the chance for pop-ups does remain in our forecast for the majority of the day, we are still looking at little accumulation expected to fall here at NCR with less than 0.10" accumulation forecasted. For the rest of the day, winds will start to pick up from the WSW before shifting over as the front makes its way through settling out of the NW this afternoon with temperatures hampered by cloud cover struggling to get into the low 80s this afternoon despite the warmest start to the day we have seen this week.
