

SUNDAY, AUGUST 28th, 2022 – 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

A much more visible morning at the surface with this steady easterly breeze keeping the fog in check. Dew points are already noticeably lower in the low 60s allowing our temperatures to briefly slide in the upper 60s this morning making it feel light jacket worthy. This will be the trend with our moisture throughout the day while mostly sunny skies and dry conditions prevail. As our guardian high pressure slides just off to our east, winds will begin to turn with an east and south component as the day wears on. A few extra clouds linger in later Sunday night, otherwise we look for another nice, but slightly windier day on Monday with temperatures slowly warming back into the low 80s. Our gorgeous weather pattern breaks down Tuesday as our friendly high pressure slides further off the coast with humidity and strong southerly flow returning ahead of the next system. The chances for a shower or storm comes late Tuesday into Wednesday as a cold front looks to slowly slide through here at Kittansett Club sometime Wednesday morning with cooler and drier air to follow later in the week.
