

MONDAY, MAY 15, 2023 – 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Rare afternoon thunderstorms are expected to be in the area. Mostly clear skies this morning will allow temperatures to reach the mid 80s once again, with a notable tick up in humidity. Winds will be much lighter throughout the day, peaking at 15 - 18 mph from the west/northwest. As the day wears on, the likelihood of a thunderstorm increases, peaking in the early evening hours. Overnight, showers stick around, but largely lose the ability to produce lightning. The remainder of the forecast is mostly dry, with shower chances confined to the nearby Cascades. Tuesday would have a better chance than Wednesday for a rogue shower, but overall Monday is the primary concern for impactful weather.
