

MONDAY, MAY 22nd, 2023 – 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Kicking off the week nicely with dry conditions with some sunshine trying to filter through the upper and lower level clouds this afternoon. Winds will primarily be out of the northeast for pretty much all day with gusts tipping into the mid 20s at times. This should challenge the golfers, but also relieve them from some of those pesky bugs. With the front now to our south, we look dry, but I would not be surprised to see a stray sprinkle or shower pop on radar along the southern Carolina coast this late afternoon. We pull some clouds back in overnight with the low back near the upper 60s. A touch sharper onshore flow for Tuesday as the mid to upper 20s would not be out of the realm of possibility. Conditions look to favor the dry side with only a very slight chance of seeing an unwanted sprinkle or shower throughout the remainder of the Championship.
