

SUNDAY, AUGUST 27th, 2023 - 6 AM U.S. Senior Amateur Weather Forecast

Conditions look to remain on par with what we saw yesterday across the region with clear skies overnight allowing temps to fall back into the low 40s this morning. An abundance of sunshine throughout the day will once again have temperatures warming up quickly this morning, with 10 AM being that magic hour that sees us make our way into the 70s before eventually topping out this afternoon in the low 80s. Winds, starting out light and variable, will start to increase in intensity as the surface heats up this morning, settling out of the SW this afternoon like we have seen all week, with speeds averaging 7 - 9 mph gusting into the mid teens at times across Martis Camp. The absence of cloud cover SUN night, along with increasingly dry conditions at the surface, will have temps making their way back into the low 40s early Monday morning as the rest of the day then looks to mirror what we have seen the first two days of the championship, as afternoon temps push their way back into the low 80s under clear skies with RH values forecasted on 20% just before lunch, making the first round of match play the driest we have seen this week.
