

MONDAY, AUGUST 28th, 2023 - 6 AM U.S. Senior Amateur Weather Forecast

Another cool start with temps only making it into the low 50s for the 10 - man playoff this morning under mostly clear skies and light and variable winds. Clear skies will once again have us warming up quickly with highs this afternoon once again make their way into the low 80s just after 1 PM. The winds for matchplay late this morning into the afternoon will do their best impression of the winds on SUN, starting out fairly light from the SE before settling out of the SW just before noon with avg speeds of 6 - 8 mph gusting into the mid teens at times. Winds will not drop off overnight like we have seen the past handful of days, as the low - pressure system finally makes its way ashore to our northwest. This system will continue to track eastward, producing strong winds across the Tahoe area for the majority of the day, with averages jumping into the mid teens and gusts all the way into the mid 20s. Even under clear skies, as flow above us starts to shift, cooler air will be ushered into the region keeping our highs TUE, only getting into the mid 70s, and will have our overnight lows the coldest of the week for WED morning.
