

THURSDAY, AUGUST 31st, 2023 - 6 AM U.S. Senior Amateur Weather Forecast

A blue super moon this morning signals the end of perfect weather here at Martis Camp this morning with temps starting off in the low 40s under clear skies and light and variable winds. Winds will be the story for the final, as speeds look to pick up over the last few holes or so, quickly jumping up into the mid to upper teens late this morning lasting through the day Friday, with averages as high as 20 mp felt across the area this afternoon with gusts making their way into the low 30s at times. The arrival of this system, first hinted at by the strengthening winds late this morning, also will be confirmed as clouds start to fill the sky for the first time in a little less than a week, helping to keep temps below normal over the next four to five days, as highs looks to only get into the mid 70s THU. On FRI this system will continue to make its way SE across CA introducing the chance for showers and storms FRI & SAT with upwards up half an inch possible, although less than a quarter is more likely to occur, as temps fall way off during the day as high struggle to get out of the 50s FRI - SUN under mostly cloudy skies and breezy conditions.
