

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 2023 – 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

The frontal precipitation accelerated through our area last night, dropping 0.32" of rain. We aren't completely out of the woods, but the majority of heavy precip has rushed off to the east. A rather peaceful morning is now expected. This afternoon, the surface front will cross through. This may kick up some unwanted showers or weak thunderstorms, but the overall forecast has taken a massive shift. 5 - 10 mph west/northwest winds will preside over the day, gusting to 15 - 18 mph at times. Overall, today has become much more palatable weather. Tonight, crisp air arrives. A wake-up around 55 degrees will feel much cooler, and so will the high in the low 70s. The humidity will officially exit the scene, and we can enjoy the final round with delightful weather!
