

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 26, 2024 – USSO 5 AM Weather Forecast

Breezy conditions greeting the setup team this morning will only look to get stronger for the final practice round on WED. Winds have migrated back down to the SW overnight and have begun the ascent into the upper teens, looking to settle there around lunchtime today accompanied by gusts in the low 30s. Mostly sunny skies this morning will allow temps to make their way into the upper 70s ahead of the arriving cloud cover from our west this afternoon which will keep us out of the 80s while also signaling the approaching overnight showers and storms. Dewpoints in the low 60s will trend upwards today with strong flow onto the coast, climbing up near 70 degrees overnight helping with convection and the chance for electricity between 10 PM and 4 AM. The good news is that the lingering showers are not looking to take the hint of moving on late THU morning with only drizzle and less than 0.05 - 0.10" now expected during morning play, leaving the majority of the 0.25 - 0.50" contained to the overnight hours. Winds, becoming more westerly on THU, will taper off near 10 mph gustin into the mid teens with temps in the mid 70s.
