AUGUST 11, 2024 - 6 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Rain and thunderstorms are still anticipated this morning and into the afternoon, although the expected rainfall has slightly decreased to 0.5 - 2 inches. We've already received 0.1 inches of rain overnight. The main line of heavy rain and thunderstorms is expected to move overhead between 8 and 10 this morning, though smaller showers and storms might arrive earlier. The main line could linger into the early afternoon. After it clears, additional storms could develop in the afternoon. Once these storms pass, temperatures will reach the low 80s with southeast winds at 6 - 12 mph. For overnight Sunday into Monday morning, more showers and storms are forecasted, but current models suggest they will mostly remain northwest of the course. The highest chance of precipitation will be just before sunrise through mid-morning. Temperatures are expected to reach the lower 90s with winds from the south and southeast at 6 - 12 mph.
